

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A data storage device has a non-volatile memory storing data content, and a control processor for evaluating selected data content of the memory to establish whether there is a match between a characteristic of, or a derivative of, the data content and a reference data content characteristic, or derivative. The processor takes an action in response to the match.